When Claire's fiancé calls off their wedding, she wants to kill herself. Claire is getting ready for her big day when a friend comes to deliver some distressing news, her fiancé, Ben, is calling off the wedding and leading Claire into a spiralling depression. She feels hurt beyond words and begins to feel like she has nothing to live for anymore. Eli is a shy young Amish man who makes a decent living from fishing. Claire goes to the lake one morning to end her life and her suffering at the betrayal, but instead of dying is saved by Eli, who was fishing nearby at the time and taken home again. Claire and Eli develop a fast friendship as he comes to see her every day after saving her life, checking on her recovery. Can heartbroken Claire and shy Eli find something more than friendship in each other? Can the simple act of a total stranger give Claire, something to live for? Can their feelings for each other bridge the difference between the Amish and the English world? Anna Lapp writes clean Amish Romance Novels.
