

The purpose of this book is to open you to different world-views and to urge you to think critically about your own faith. It is not important for people to always be in agreement about metaphysical questions nor is it important for people to completely understand another's point of view, but it is important to respect and communicate with all people regardless of differences in order to encourage and foster a sense of community and a shared sense of human being. May this book stand as a testament to the capacity of human cooperation and friendship in the midst of deep personal and spiritual differences.
