

Wars may be fought with weapons but they are won by men, claimed General George S. Patton. The victory in the Mexican War can be credited to the soldiers, sailors, and Marines who fought and died in Americas first war conducted on foreign soil. Those few hundred Marines involved in the Mexican War played a small but significant role in Americas final success. This chronicle was written to give the reader a clearer idea of Marine activities in the various campaigns and landings. The original manuscript was begun by Bernard C. Nalty, who is currently a historian with the Department of the Air Force. His notes provided an excellent general outline for the first part of the story. Official records of the Marine Corps and appropriate historical works were utilized in compiling this narrative.
