

The exhibition series 'Talents' consists of three titles: Talents 15 'In Limbo', Talents 16 'Approximate Landscape' and Talents 17 'Life With Maggie'. This series of exhibits and accompanying books have been created to support up-and-coming photographers and art critics who are launching their careers, providing an experimental platform for new talents and voices emerging from Europe. Each solo exhibition is accompanied by a publication in which the images and texts create a dialog: the emerging talents introduce themselves and their projects to a wider audience and put their work up for discussion, creating a public forum. The exhibition 'Approximate Landscape' features Christoph Engel's photographs and accompanying criticism by Ulrike Westphal showing the world from an extraordinary perspective. His pictures are constructions of hundreds of photographs, assembled from the views of Google Earth.
